Sashimono Workstation

Inspired by the art of Japanese wood joinery, the Sashimono workstation embodies the ideals associated with this ancient craft. The process by which Japanese joinery is fabricated is a complex one, this striking piece takes these elements and applies a more modern, practical approach to construction.

Process Sketches

The design process started with a simple application of the basic work surface: a flat surface with supports underneath. Then came the curvature, applied to the edges of the surface, that sent the design to its inevitable conclusion-The Sashimono Workstation.
